didn't like him, but he was also a civil lawyer. That's another story. I don't want to embarrass anybody, but he was a civil lawyer as well as the headmaster, or whatever you want to call him, and not a man that I thought understood boys. That's either here nor there, and so a group did go to see Father Vitus about this.

I remember he called in every kid in the high school, in the section that dealt with us who were going on -- or thought we might go on for priesthood. He did talk to each one, and I can't tell you to this day how he made his decisions. Some of the boys left the school immediately. Some of the boys went on to the end of the year and some of them -- and I don't mean big numbers here -some of them stayed and went on, left on their own years later. So that was the first major time when I -- again, I saw this as an individual person, as I did Father Alcuin, not as a prevalent thing because there was so many wonderful priest teachers that were incredibly good to me and helpful in my

Q Now that you read that highlighted portion in the article, the quote attributed to him, would you agree with that?

MR. ROTHSTEIN: I show my objection. The question is compound. It involves multiple statements in here.

THE WITNESS: There's several things he's saying there, which he picked 1985, which is the date I put down also as the moment when we began to talk about these things seriously, but there are other aspects of it that Tom would not have known about because he had not attended the meeting of 1985 and had not heard what went on at that meeting, so I think it's a little bit of too broad the bishops in 1985 suggested that we bishops not proceed to get them out of priesthood but keep them in the priesthood and monitor them there because he felt that the church could monitor better than civil society was doing. Now, that sounds strange, but that was the advice that this so-called eminent psychotherapist was giving to us at that time.

And as I looked at it at the time, I thought well, what other choice does one have. If you don't have the means to take legal action that's not going to last in the courts — church courts for 10 years, how are you going to monitor then somebody who you can't get rid of, as it were, and that is the dilemma of that period that we were thinking about talking about and trying to come up with some kind of solution.

Certainly the idea of sending them for a lengthy period to one of these centers that dealt with priest pedophiles was probably the solution that most bishops took, and when those centers would -- or would say well, we think that they are now safe, that would alter what the bishop's decision might be, but even then there were no clear guidelines on how you monitor, and even today it's one of those things that I just am baffled by a sweep.

BY MR. ANDERSON:

Q Fair enough. Would you agree with this statement? After 1985 and what you and other bishops learned about the problem of sexual abuse, would you agree that -- can I have that -- "That no bishop should put any priest who has sexually abused children back into any parish for any reason"?

MR. ROTHSTEIN: Pardon me. Asking the witness to comment on other bishops beyond himself.

THE WITNESS: It's difficult to say never, and that's why there cannot be some extenuating circumstance there or some that would change things. I don't think this is getting at the problem we were facing, though, which is a problem of -- well, two problems actually. One of them was what kind of legal procedures you could bring so that the question would be solved more permanently, and the second one would be what do you do even if you take them out of ministry, how do you monitor someone, and I don't think civil society has done a very good job on that either.

We're still trying to figure out how you monitor people 24 hours out of the day, and that was what -- Fred Berlin and that talk he gave to because we're getting a society with so many people who are dangerous on the streets. I don't know how you monitor all this, and to me it's a baffle.

BY MR. ANDERSON:

- Q Archbishop, as you talk about, and we do, the problem of sexual abuse of minors by priests, you said that you tried to understand this problem and you asked the question and I wrote it down, when a priest abuses a child and you know about it as the archbishop, you ask the question what other choice does one have but to monitor him, and let me ask a question now. As archbishop, is it fair to say that you chose to when a priest was suspected of abusing a child, admitted or not, that you chose to do your best to monitor him?
- A Yes.
- Q Okay. And other than monitoring him and sending him for treatment, did you choose to do anything else?
- A We set up a program where a permanent deacon in the diocese would come to us from Los Angeles where he was in charge of the monitoring program for the police force of Los Angeles.
- Q When would this have been, Archbishop?
- A This would have been in the '90s. His name was

But he Q 11 A I don't think that's the problem because cases 11 set up for me kind of a monitoring system where he would keep track of the person, visit the person 12 that -- where the Statute of Limitation had not 12 13 expired, as in something like the Effinger case or 13 regularly, and he was shrewd, and he could pick 14 14 when there was a problem, and then we had -- in the Peter Burns case, these were easy because you part of that system was that the members of the 15 hand them over to the civil authorities and they 15 16 parish council and staff were informed so that they 16 take their course, but it's the cases where the 1.7 could monitor the priest, plus all the restrictions 17 Statute of Limitation had expired, these were the 18 hard cases for us to handle. 18 about any kind of contact with minors. 10		10	ever charged or was it turned back over to you to 11		11	handle?
12		12	A As this shows the difficulty of these cases because
13		13	for almost every case we had five sets of lawyers.
14		14	I have nothing against lawyers, but when you have
15		15	to deal with five sets for every case, it gets a
16		16	little complicated, so that the priest had his own
17		17	civil lawyer and his own canonical lawyer, the
18		18	victims had their own lawyers and then the diocese
19		19	had its own lawyer and canonical lawyer and then
20		20	you had the insurance companies, so when you put
21		21	all of this together, sometimes it got a little bit
22		22	out of control.
23		23	I have no I had no problem with a
24		24	priest having his own lawyer. I think this was
25	discussed that you should deal with the priests as	25	absolutely necessary and even his own canonical

2	A The reason why I can't answer that real clearly is	2	particular case it was the lawyer of the individual
3	that we did have a case where the district attorney	3	priest who was dealing with the civil and not us,
4	met with the personal lawyer of the priest that	4	and that happened in several cases until we had
5	none of us were present and got some kind of an	5	somehow come to some agreement on who would handle

7	Q Who is the priest, Archbishop?	7	So in this case it was the priest's individual

12	conviction or what was it?	12	I had a lot of problems trying to get any clarity,
13	MR. ANDERSON: Well, this is a priest	13	he said, he said, he said and it was not a good
14	that's being investigated by the district	14	situation. I admit this.
15	attorney's	15	Q And did you after that after that investigation
16	THE WITNESS: It's not a conviction.	16	or involvement by the DA continue Wagner in
17	MR. ANDERSON: office, right?	17	ministry in the Archdiocese?
18	THE WITNESS: Right.	18	A I did, but what they had agreed on, which was that
19	BY MR. ANDERSON:	19	he be moved to another place and the police in that

21		21	was the agreement.
52 81		22	Q What police agency was supposed to have supervised
1	`	23	Wagner?
23	A Somewhere in the '80s.	24	A Fond du Lac.
24 25	Q And who was the prosecutor that was investigating,	25	O And did he abuse after that?
