Re: Raymond Pcolka

Dear Monsignor Curtiss:

Please be advised that Raymond Pcolka was seen by me for the first time in December, 1960 and seven times in 1961; the last visit being on June 5th, having been referred for psychiatric consultation by his family physician. He had been seen previously by another psychiatrist and psychiatric treatment was suggested.

Briefly, Raymond has been suffering from an obsessive compulsive type neurosis, which for a time interfered with his ability to concentrate and which was associated with anxiety. During the period, when under my observation, there appeared to be a lessening of symptoms, and it was agreed that he would seek further psychiatric help if he again became uncomfortable.

It would be my feeling, if there is presently any sign of emotional disturbance, that he be again reviewed by a psychiatrist in the vicinity of the Seminary, so that he could continue his work.

Sincerely yours,

Jacob Meshken
