These notes will be a humble attempt to fulfill the request of the Supreme Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office for information and suggestions regarding the tremendous problem presented by the priest who through lack of priestly self-discipline has become a problem to Mother Church.

INTRODUCTORY REMARK

I have said "tremendous problem" because it represents a contradiction: the man of God whose vocation involves leading souls to God and yet has no priest, at least for the time being, taken even his soul away from God by departing from the clearly defined discipline of Mother Church for priests.

Let me say in the beginning that the policies which we would like to see enforced represent a via media between the extremes of "persecution" and what to our mind seems, at least at times, to represent a party that is set blindfold of the impact of the last judgment sinning on the care of souls.

AN IMPORTANT DISTINCTION

We believe a clear distinction should be made between the priest whose sin is like the sin of David or Peter in departing his whole way of life, and the priest whose life is found upon investigation to be one of continual weakness and habitual failure. We feel that the first class should be given the widest opportunities, not only to restore their souls, but to qualify and to permit them to exercise the fullness of their ministries, including the hearing of confessions. We would recommend this especially on an ad experimentum basis of the priest who has escaped the engagements of a civil marriage and spent three years in penance, at least in the United States, a priest who is activated but does not bear any suspicion of actual immoral conduct and a sense of conduct and concern to Catholics.

On the other hand, were a priest for many years to fall into repeated sins which are considered, generally speaking, as abominable (abuse of nature) such as homosexuality and most seriously the abuse of children, we feel strongly that such activated priests should be given the alternative of a retired life within the protection of monastic walls or complete laicization. We favor the former in most cases, for laicization is at best the less of two evils. If a priest is willing to accept protection in his priesthood, this aid to salvation in the Name of Christ should be made available to him.

In other words, we feel that many priests who would be of great service to Mother Church are now lost to the apostolate of the cure d'âme by reason of the traditional reluctance to grant such priests the full exercise of priestly life, including the hearing of confessions. In America there is a great use, thank God, and resort to the Sacrament of Penance upon the part of the people and clergy and a priest who cannot hear confessions is about as useful as a soldier without arms. To restore completely a priest whose failure is a one-time failure would represent not only a sorry to the individual, but a sorry to thousands of souls who would fall under his care. Surely St. Peter was a bitter penitent by reason of his fall and St. Augustine by reason of his former life.

Extending this sorry to the case where failure does not fall into a behavior problem, we would recommend greater severity, at least in the external form, with men who fall habitually in those clauses of sin which are concomitant to the accepted holiness of the priesthood as to be the conscience of very deep, deep scandal to the souls of the faithful. We would recommend that it be treated with the same severity as in the case of solicitation that repeated falls of this character would deprive a man permanently of the exercise of priestly faculties, rather than his Mass "intra nos".

THE INTERIOR LIFE

Moreover, without wishing to be an alarmist, after more than forty years in the priesthood I am personally convinced that we are not turning out today, either in religious orders or in the diocesan priesthood, men as deeply dedicated to their priesthood as we did in former days. The reason for this, if it be so, and many experienced priests agree with me that it is so, the reason to my mind is that the emphasis placed on intellectual qualifications has brought about a de-emphasis on the necessity of the priest of God being a man of prayer. Before leaving the seminary, diocesan or regular, the young priest should have at least a beginning of the foundation of an interior life. Besides this need of interior life, we have reached the conclusion from our experiences with hundreds of assemblies that in fully 30% of the cases of priests who have failed Our Lord their entrance into the priesthood followed upon the action of question marks against their qualifications that were

In our view another by concern is authority. Red lights of warning were flashing and these warnings were not observed. A more careful screening of candidates would seem to be desirable. The case of intellect, unless that intellect is balanced by moral qualities and humility, is potentially a liability rather than an asset in the priesthood.

Increasingly we find "immaturity" in the priests coming to us, which is indicative of a lack of both motivation and of capacity for the sacrifice inherent in the priestly vocation. At present some professors do not realize that maturity and intellectual ability are not extraordinary factors.

THEOLOGY AND POLICY

As regards to our treatment in dealing with priests, it is based upon the attempted translation of creating every priest, even the priest under suspension, with reverence for his priesthood, even when he may himself be lacking in reverence toward that priesthood. The fallen priest is yet capable of regeneration and if at all possible is treated in the penitent's program as the Canonical system treated the lifless body of the sinner. We aim to respect in the individual the priesthood which at the ~~same~~ at least the ~~same~~ respect.

In our therapeutic policy, while trying to utilize the finest medical and psychiatric assistance available (we have both a surgeon-physician and Catholic psychiatrist on our staff), we emphasize the spiritual because, aside from outright insanity, the salvation of the individual (and the consequent rehabilitation of the priest) must of necessity result from the correspondence of the individual will and intellect of the man with the grace of God and the sacramental life of the Church. The will must capitulate to God. Hence the intellect must be dominated by the thought of His.

Hence, our treatment is aimed deliberately to prepare a priest to a Eucharistic convert, both in the Sacrament of the Mass and in Eucharistic adoration. There alone with God, exposed as it were to God, the Sacred Heart of Jesus can meet directly in the soul of the priest the unique domination of a Divine Love.

We, the Prelates, are accustomed to speak of a threshold therapy; the therapy of a healthy, inspiring physical environment; the therapy of fraternal charity; and, the therapy of sacramental grace, especially as flowing from the Eucharist.

The problems involved in dealing with priestly rehabilitation will vary considerably from country to country but the basic approach, or so it seems to us, must always be based on the interpretation of the Mercy of God, which is the raison d'être of the Church, and from which mercy surely the priest of God should not be excluded. The Prodigal of the Gospel received the fatted calf and presumably responded in his after-life to the paternal mercy exercised in his behalf. The man who fell among thieves found a Good Samaritan and the Good Samaritan provided an inn for the care of this wounded neighbor. We thank God that today through the efforts of such men as the late Father Vatuturini, F.C.J., and other zealous priests there are now in many parts of the world inns of the Good Samaritan where Christ's wounded priests may be cared for. And we have been deeply edified by the obvious desire of both the Holy Father and the members of the Supreme Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office, as well as of Prelates and of priests everywhere, to help their fallen brethren.

A RECOMMENDATION

If I may be permitted to add one last word, it would be a plea for a swifter rehabilitation of men whose failures have been a single incident, even though this incident led them into a situation from which it has taken them years to escape. And a more distinct teaching in the last years of the seminary of the heavy penalty involved in tampering with the innocence (or even non-innocence) of little ones.

SUMMARY

In summation: to the rank but willing, chalier, to the straggler, complete rehabilitation, at least ad experimentum; to those like the thousands of ex-priests reportedly living in sin in Italy and other parts of the world, a release from celibacy, that scandal may be removed, but at the price of a fixed lay status - sorry to say with a permanent priesthood. This could come as a special act of His Holiness on the eve of the Ecumenical Council.
