Dear Rev. Melan:

Over the period of years that I have known Rev. David Holley he has shown steady, progressive, and consistent improvement and growth in personality and character maturation.

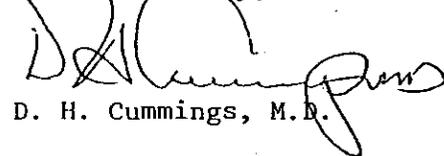

In my opinion the unhealthy and grossly immature pattern of thoughts and feelings that led to the abnormal impulses and behavior of the past has been totally eliminated, and replaced by wholesome and mature concepts of himself and others and a vastly improved, entirely appropriate and realistic pattern of interpersonal relationships throughout his personal and professional life.

I do not feel that any special consideration is needed for his living and working conditions.

Beyond providing him with the opportunity to be active in his ministry and to pursue and develop his artistic talents, I would not feel he has any special needs. I consider a reemergence of the thoughts, impulses, and behavior patterns of the past to be extremely unlikely under any foreseeable circumstances.

Please forgive my delay in answering your inquiry.

Yours sincerely,

D. H. Cummings, M.D.
