PAIN

It climbs inside you eating away You hold on waiting for the day The day when you can't hold it in Insíde you líke a sín You feel so alone when you aren't at all alone But it makes you feel so tight and so god dam alone You want to reach out and speak of your fear You want to tell of your deep and daring Yet it's in so tight that it's almost going to burst To suck you up like one hell of a thirst You keep holding back, too scared to show your pain You smíle, yet you know it's so hard to explain The loneliness you feel the heartache you've had For the years as a child, it's just held you back The memories of your past It has just gone so fast The innocence taken from you When you trusted so much It grows each day inside you like a disease You keep yelling "My God can't someone help me please" One day you say to that tight thing inside You will be all nothing and my life will be a guide A guide to finding myself and of who I will be A guide to let all who want to see me I will be rid of that pain in my chest That knot that holds me from feeling at rest

If I just find that person who can reach out to me The one who will say "It's alright you will see".
