

Deacon Year In Parishes

New Priests Are Old Pros

When a newly ordained priest comes into a parish this June, he'll have more than book knowledge as his forte.

The 22 deacons who will be ordained by Newark Archbishop Thomas A. Boland at Sacred Heart Cathedral, Newark, May 29 all have worked in parishes and institutions during their final seminary year.

They've assisted pastors, especially with religious education, and served as social workers and counselors, in hospitals and on campuses, in city and suburb. A number have worked their deacon year in Bergen parishes.

Most are graduates of Seton Hall University and all are completing their theological education at Immaculate Conception Seminary, Mahwah. They will celebrate their first mass of thanksgiving at their parish church.
